

In Re; Proceeding 02-278

Do not take away the right of a state, in this case my State of Indiana, to regulate unwanted telephone solicitation. As currently proposed, you leave a loop-hole big enough to drive a truck or any and every telephone solicitor in the country through it. Solicitor will simply state that they thought of me as an "existing customer" even though they only acquired/purchased my number or information yesterday - or contact me by random computer dialing of phone numbers.

Let's leave some control of governance to the individual states as provided for in the Constitution.
